

Senior Project Manager

Location: York, UK

We are a fast growing, innovative York-based company focused on developing point of care diagnostic products across a range of sectors including clinical, veterinary, agricultural and environmental markets. We are looking for an experienced project management to support our growing pipeline of lateral flow diagnostic projects working alongside our R&D, manufacturing, commercial, finance and quality and regulatory teams to ensure projects are delivered on time and on budget.

You will be responsible for pro-actively managing the development of products from feasibility through to manufacture. Lateral flow experience is not essential but you will have experience of project managing pharmaceutical or medical devices through an ISO-certified design review process.

Primary Duties and responsibilities:

- Pro-actively managing multiple projects on a day-to-day basis.
- Designing, creating and delivering project work plans and revising/modifying as appropriate to meet changing demands throughout the project.
- Identifying or ensuring resource has been identified /is available and assigning responsibilities and deliverables as appropriate.
- Ensuring project documents are complete, accurate, current, and accessible to the participants and in accordance with the Quality Management System.
- Working alongside R&D, manufacturing, commercial and quality & regulatory teams.

The candidate would ideally have experience in the following areas:

Essential

- Degree or higher in a scientific subject or equivalent professional experience [3+ years].
- Project Management experience of [3+ years].
- A flexible approach to working in a relatively new but rapidly expanding organisation.
- Hands-On approach, a team player and a good sense of humour!

Desirable

- Prince 2 Qualification.
- Point of care diagnostic experience.
- Developing devices in line with EU and US regulatory standards, to support CE Marking and FDA Clearance.
